Dear Reader;

I am seeking a summer internship to further my development and education as an artist and specifically as an animator.

Animation is something that has been important in my life for longer than I've known. It started with different movies when I was younger, but it took some time for me to connect that with my passion for the arts. I've been involved with studio art since I was a child. Because of that, I have had significant experience with critiques and working with other people to refine my own artwork; I am eager to learn from others, both instructors and peers. Working in other fields has taught me how to stay organized and work quickly. This has also taught me even more problem-solving skills. Going to college for animation has helped to transfer those classic sensibilities to a more modern art form. I'm familiar with 2D Animation on paper and digitally, as well as 3D software. Beyond artistic skills, balancing class assignments with outside work has helped me to manage my time with various deadlines. I believe I would be a good fit for this internship because I'm a fast learner, and I have a solid foundation in animation to base this in.

I grew up watching different films with my parents and would love the chance to work with other artists to learn even more about what I love. I believe my drive, work ethic, and broad artistic experience and education would make me an asset to any studio or project. I appreciate your consideration for a summer internship position and would be grateful for the opportunity to discuss this with you further.

Sincerely,

Rachel Brumbelow
